

Water Out Responds to Hurricane Damage along the Gulf Coast

The summer of 2005 brought total devastation to many residents of the Gulf Coast. Thousands were left homeless and businesses were severely damaged from multiple hurricanes that traveled through Florida, Louisiana, and Mississippi.

Water Out Southern New England's large loss/ national catastrophe response capabilities allowed us to respond to the water damaged buildings. With the amazing strength of the convectant drying trailers, businesses were up and running as quickly as possible, minimizing down-time and lost wages.

Here are a few examples of large buildings that we dried out.

96- Unit Condo Complex

350 air movers, 12 Water Out trailers and 5 days of drying expedited the return of 36 families in this 96 unit condo complex. A roof failure resulted in the flooding of many of the units in this structure. Hurricane Rita added an extra day of drying as hoses on the trailers were brought inside to avoid any secondary damage from high winds

Delta Software

As Water Out Southern New England was transporting drying equipment from Hurricane Dennis jobsites on the Florida panhandle to Mississippi's Gulf Coast, the owner of Delta Software followed Water Out for about 40 miles. At a rest stop, Delta Software hired Water Out to dry their building in Gulfport, Mississippi. After a roof patch was finished, Water Out had Delta computers dry within 5 days. During this job, constant neighborhood evacuations were ordered as the military was removing bodies from downtown Gulfport. Once the delays were over, repairs commenced shortly thereafter.

Louisiana Real Estate Company

A real estate company in Metairie, Louisiana sustained roof damage during Hurricane Katrina. After the roof was repaired and contaminated materials were removed, Water Out Southern New England had the building dry in three days, including all their documents.

Oreck Vacuum

In conjunction with Paramount Catastrophe Restoration Services, Water Out had 2,500 Oreck employees back to work only 2 weeks after Hurricane Katrina heavily damaged the Oreck Vacuum Cleaner plant in Bay St. Louis, Mississippi and other areas of Mississippi' Gulf Coast.
